European Intelligence.

LONDON, April 11.

RATHER FARCICAL.

The accounts from Constantinople, of the 4th ult. bring the details of the ceremonies attending the presentation of the credentials of general Brune to the grand seignior. Having notified his arrival, which took place on the 6th of January, to the porte, he was presented in succession to the different ministers, who felt all the interest which the first consul took in the re-establishment of that strong and ancient friendship which subsisted between the two Empires. They regretted, however, that the feasts of the Ramazan and the Bairam, retarded the audiences of the French Ambassador.

The first audience took place on the 14th of February. At ten in the morning the ambassador embarked at Top Hana, in the caik of seven pair of oars sent him by the Tehaux-Bachi, accompanied by the secretaries of Legation, and the Dragoon Franchini. The Syrene frigate, which was anchored at the entrance of the harbour, fired a salute of 19 guns. The ambassador's suite occupied 120 caiks.

The ambassador landed at the foot of the stairs of the vizier's palace, where prince Callimachi, accompanied by different officers of distinction, received him, and instantly conducted him through the apartments where the ambassadors are in the habit of waiting. The ambassador entered the grand chamber of the Divan (Arz Odasse) at the same moment with the grand vizier, and by an opposite door. After reciprocal salutations, the grand vizier seated himself in a sofa, and the ambassador was placed on a chair opposite to him. The Reis Effendi, and several other ministers, stood on the right hand of the vizier. The ambassador pronounced the following discourse, which was immediately interpreted by prince Callimachi:

"The most great, most powerful, and most magnanimous first consul of the French republic, Bonaparte, delegates me to the sublime Ottoman porte, in the character of ambassador. I come, according to usage, to present to your highness the letters which invest me with this eminent character. Under the auspices of a treaty which renews the ancient alliance, and by the happy disposition of your highness's sentiments, all my measures will, I hope, successfully tend to draw closer the ties which imperious circumstances had relaxed but which the Ottomans and the French are accustomed to regard as the pledge of their mutual prosperity. The genius of the magnanimous first consul, the glory which he attaches to maintaining the peace of the world, the renown of his innumerable victories, the peaceable attitude of powers heretofore our enemies, the weight which the French republic has in the balance of the destinies of Europe, are so many pledges of the stability as well as of the importance of our engagement. Your highness knows that France is the friend, the natural ally of the Ottoman empire; that in point of good faith, generosity and greatness, the two nations have not any equals in the world, and that the dearest interests attach them to each other. I think myself happy in having been chosen to maintain this union; and I regard the honourable post assigned to me at the sublime porte as a glorious recompense for my military services. I am pleased to find, in the depositary of the confidence of his highness Sultan Selim III. a grand vizier, a warrior, whose generosity and discretion smooth the difficulties of my new career. I present to him my congratulations on the peace, and I pray God to bless your highness in length of days and prosperity."

The grand vizier replied in terms expressive of his satisfaction at the renewal of the ancient friendship between the Ottoman porte and France, and particularly with the choice made by the first consul of an ambassador, who, he was persuaded, would faithfully exert himself to draw still closer the ties of friendship between the two powers.

The ambassador and his suite having then received a variety of presents, returned to the French palace.

On the 22d of February the ambassador had an audience of the grand seignior, whom he addressed in the following terms:

"Most high, most excellent, most powerful, and most magnanimous and invincible emperor of the Mussulmans, Sultan Selim, in whom shine forth honour and virtue; the most great, most powerful, and most magnanimous first consul of the French, Bonaparte, sends me to your sublime porte in the quality of ambassador. These are the letters of credence by which he invests me with this eminent character. In presenting them to your highness, I am charged to felicitate you upon the happy conclusion of a peace, which re-establishes ancient friendships, and to testify to you how much the most magnanimous first consul takes an interest in the glory and prosperity of your reign.

"It is that republic, that great empire of which I am the ambassador, which through me, offers you its desires of the most perfect friendship. Fidelity and generosity are the virtues of the Germans and the French. This resemblance of character is a primary bond of connexion formed by nature. Long habit had confirmed it; and every interest concurred to draw it still closer. I am so much the happier in the mission which has been entrusted to me, as I daily perceive the justice and greatness which animates your highness have been transferred into the minds of those enlightened men to whom you have confided the different branches of your immense power. Happy in having to declare to your highness the sentiments of the immutable friendship of the First Consul, I am still more so, in being able to inform my government that I have witnessed the respectful affection borne towards you by all the faithful Mussulmen, and that on the part of your highness and the ministers, I have experienced that exalted kindness which proves how much you have in your heart preserved your attachment to the most ancient and most constant of your friends. I pray the Almighty God, that for the happiness of your people, he may prolong your days, free from pain and trouble, and that he may spread the renown of your glory and your wisdom throughout the universe."

Whilst prince Callimachi was interpreting the ambassador's speech, Sultan Selim, whose person is handsome and full of majesty, seemed satisfied, and pointed out the passages which flattered him, by signs of approbation. His highness then ordered the Grand Vizier to make a reply. The Grand Vizier spoke in a grave and respectful manner; and his speech was thus interpreted by the Dragoman of the Porte.

"It is on the part of his majesty, the most high, most august, and most powerful, that his highness the Grand Vizier replies to your excellency, and feels anxious to express to you the satisfaction felt by his highness at the renewal of the former friendship between the Sublime Porte and the republic of France; and also, in consequence of the good intentions and the sincere sentiments manifested on the part of the most magnanimous First Consul, Bonaparte, and to assure you still farther of the disposition and intention of his highness to consolidate, in every respect, the ties of sincere friendship which unite the two powers."

The ambassador, on leaving the palace, was presented with a horse richly harnessed. The Dragomans, the French merchants, the officers of the frigate, and the commissaries of commercial relations, dined the same day with the ambassador; in the evening he received the complementary visits of the diplomatic body; and the ceremonies of the day were concluded with a grand ball.

Island of Goree.

This place has not yet been surrendered to France; a circumstance for which loud complaints are made against this country. The Paris papers have published a long correspondence between Col. Frazer, the English Governor at that place, and the French Commandant of Senegal, who was ordered to take possession of Goree. Col. Frazer was prepared to surrender the place, but waited for a transport from England to bring away the troops, stores, and provisions. The French Commandant offered to furnish him with two French ships to carry the garrison to Sierra Leone.

Col. Frazer declined the offer, not knowing of any example of an English garrison having evacuated an island restored by a treaty of peace, under any flag but its own. He wished, however, to delay giving his final answer till the return of a vessel which he had dispatched to Sierra Leone. That vessel brought him the information that the Governor of Sierra Leone had freighted a transport to bring away the garrison. But in the meantime Commodore Hollowell, in the Argos, touched at Goree, and informed Col. Frazer that the provisions there were destined for another service; and that a vessel would be sent for them from England direct. He therefore felt it to be his duty to wait the arrival of that vessel. The French Commandant made some objection to this arrangement, and conceived that the provisions might have been left under his care, and make himself responsible for them, and engaging to deliver them to any person sent to receive them. Col. Frazer declined acceding to the plan proposed by the French Commandant, and persisted in waiting the arrival of the vessel from England. The dispatches which the French Commandant sent off to his government, giving an account of this event, are dated the 26th of January.

NEW YORK, May 30.

Captain Joy, of the brig Thetis from Bordeaux, left the port on the 28th April, at which time, as he informs us, no circumstance had occurred by which the momentous question of Peace or War could be decided. We have seen letters of the 23d from gentleman of the first establishment in Bordeaux, which express an opinion (grounded principally on the frequent interchange of couriers, the length of the negotiation, & the little preparations for war making by the French) that the dispute between the two Governments will be amicably adjusted.

Capt. Lasher, from Cadiz, informs us that the quarantine on American vessels in that port is taken off. In the bay were nearly 20 vessels laden with not less than 15,000 barrels of flour, which could not be disposed of at 8 dollars. Markets very dull. The misunderstanding between the English and French governments formed the principal subject of conversation in Cadiz; and nothing was more dreaded than the speedy recommencement of hostilities.

SAVANNAH, May 13.

Federal Circuit Court.

WILLIAM J. HOBBY,

vs.

DAY & HELEY.

This was an action brought in the fifth circuit court of the United States, by the Plaintiff, William J. Hobby, late post master at Augusta, against the defendants Ambrose Day and James Heley, for a false and malicious libel, published in a paper edited and printed by them, entitled Louisville Gazette, and Republican Trumpet; wherein the plaintiff, then post master, was charged in substance with being in the habit of committing alarming abuses in his office, with detaining and sometimes suppressing letters; with sending newspapers of a republican complexion by wrong routes, destroying or detaining them till they became useless; with refusing to deliver the papers of the defendants to their subscribers in Augusta, and other abuses which the publication insinuated, had increased to such a degree as to occasion numerous complaints and to become of public notoriety.

On charges of this high and criminal nature, which if true, would necessarily involve the guilt of PERJURY, as they could not be committed without a violation of his oath of office, the plaintiff thought proper to afford the defendants an opportunity of producing their proofs in a court of justice, and on Tuesday last the cause came on for trial in this city, when numerous as it was pretended had been the abuses, as generally as they were alleged to be known, not a single witness was produced to establish any one of the allegations, nor was the minutest evidence offered of a COMPLAINT against the office having ever existed, but the whole publication appeared to be totally without foundation, and to have originated in diabolical wickedness and deliberate malice. After a short argument by Mr. Bulloch for the defendants, and Mr. Walker for the plaintiff, the cause was committed to a jury of upright, impartial and honest men, many of whom, though not agreeing in political sentiments with the plaintiff, rightly considered and justly estimated the sacred right of individual reputation, felt themselves bound by eternal principles of justice, and who after retiring for a few moments, returned a verdict for the plaintiff, damages two thousand dollars.

FROM NEW ORLEANS.

Captain Don, of the brig Friends Adventure, arrived at New York, in 21 days from New Orleans, informs, that the greatest preparations were making there to receive the French troops, that even the custom house had been converted into barracks for their reception, and that contracts had been made for the delivery of 1000 cattle in the month of May for the army. Ere this they must have been informed of the blockade of this expected French army in the ports of Holland, by an English Squadron: and that their preparations will be useless, not only for the present, but we hope for ever.

We have received verbal information from New Orleans, as late as the 29th of last month. On the 23d there arrived at that place a Courier from Old Spain. It was languinely expected there, by the Americans, that this vessel was the bearer of some satisfactory explanation on the subject of the right of deposit. Unfortunately however, when the contents of her advices were known, it appeared, that the intendant had indeed received answers to the first dispatches, forwarded soon after the occlusion of the port:—
BUT THAT THESE ANSWERS WERE UNACCOMPANIED BY ANY
ORDERS OR EXPLANATION
ON THE SUBJECT!!! This silence on a matter which involved the good faith, and consequent tranquility of the Court of Spain, could not be construed into any thing less than a tacit approbation of the intendant; and so it was generally understood at New-Orleans. Our informant is further of opinion, from an in-imate acquaintance with the character and principles of Mr. Morales, the Intendant, that he would not hazard his reputation by committing an act of this magnitude, without he were well assured of the support of his government.

Indeed circumstances were daily disclof-ing at New Orleans, which more and more evinced, that this unprovoked attack on our rights, was the result of cabinet intrigue between Spain and France.
The above information we received from a gentleman of unquestionable veracity.

Gallatin and Mathew Lyon.—Mathew Lyon, the famous Knight of the wooden Sword, and of spitting memory, is agent of the United States for furnishing supplies to the army. A bill drawn by him on the Treasury of the United States was lately forwarded to this place to be presented for acceptance, or payment, if it could be had. The bill was drawn in February last and the money was not due from the United States until October next. The bill was presented, and paid immediately, though the credit of the United States or of the Drawer would not have been injured by delay, because it was mentioned by Mathew when he sold the bill, that the money was not due from the United States till Oct. We have been thus particular in this transaction, not from any great importance attached to it, but to contrast it with the fate of another bill drawn under very different circumstances.

Mr. Steele, the late Secretary for the Mississippi Territory, drew on the Treasury of the United States for money which was due to him, under an act of Congress, for services performed in collecting the direct tax. When the bill was presented to Mr. Gallatin, he acknowledged the money to be due, but would not pay the bill until all the returns under the direct tax had come in, and the accounts settled. This was in November, 1801. In this situation the bill lay unpaid, until the accounts were settled, which was near fourteen months after it was first presented, when the holder called upon Mr. Gallatin for payment. To his unspeakable astonishment, the bill could not be paid, because—hear the Geneva—because all the money due for these services was not drawn for at the same time.* The bills presented were therefore protested, and returned to the drawers, the fair and honest creditors of the United States, who are subjected to all the expences and damages of a protested bill, besides the long delay of payment.
The baseness of this transaction can only be fully understood by comparing it with the one first detailed, and seriously reflecting on the consequences which must and *The money was not all due Mr. Steele, his agents being entitled to a part. The bill of one of his agents he forwarded with his own, and it met the same fate. The other agent, living probably at a great distance, and not wanting his money, has not thought proper to draw for it; therefore both the other creditors must wait the pleasure of this one. If he should not call on the United States for his money, these creditors who have no connexion with or control over him, must lose their debt for his folly or negligence. This doctrine has certainly the merit of novelty to recommend it. It may have been considered as very just and equitable in France or Geneva, but not in this country.

might result from it. In the first we see a man despised by every person of character in the United States made the agent of government, and such anxiety shown to render him service and to honor his drafts, that they are paid many months before they are due. On the other hand we see a faithful and good officer, universally respected and esteemed, drawing upon the Treasury for money acknowledged to be due him. The secretary, instead of paying it, puts it off on frivolous pretext for more than a year, and then subjects the drawer to very great expence, trouble and delay, which might have been avoided, by stating the objections at first. The damages occasioned by the protest are regulated by the different states. In few are they less and in some more than 15 per centum on the whole amount, besides interest, cost and charges. A pretty little sum for an American to pay for the whim or caprice of an insolent foreigner.

We are not acquainted with Mr. Steele's circumstances; but let us put a very natural supposition, and a very common case: Suppose Mr. Steele, being employed by the government, had neglected all other business, depending solely on his official emoluments to support his family—relying on the promptitude of government to pay its debts, he enters into engagements on the credit of his public bills, to provide for the future support of his family; most of his fortune, and all his credit, rest on these bills; they are forwarded—when presented at the Treasury such an answer is given, as to keep alive hope, and to support credit.—After several months delay and anxious expectation, the bills are suddenly protested, the unfortunate, though fair creditor, relying on the faith of government, is irretrievably ruined, and himself and family reduced to beggary.

It may be answered, perhaps, that in the present instance, the consequences will not be as injurious as expressed. Of this we cannot certainly speak; but every person will allow, that there are thousands on whom such conduct would operate as fatally as above described; and towards any person it would be in the highest degree unjust.

Such, Americans, are the glorious effects of placing imported patriots at the head of your affairs. The dregs and outcasts of every foreign nation, are received with open arms, nourished and supported by our government, whilst those foreigners, whose residence is really beneficial, and native Americans, are spurned with indignation by our rulers, and ruined by reliance on the faith and honor of government. Such are the men selected by the chief magistrate to conduct your affairs; not because they are better qualified, but because they feel none of those sympathetic emotions, none of those unphilosophical weaknesses, which arise from being the children of one common country, and from those tender endearments and early associations, which form the strongest cement to society, the firmest foundation of government, and the most fruitful source of friendship and patriotism. The man who fanned the flame that threatened to conflagrate our country, could not be supposed very warmly attached to its property or happiness: Nor should we look for nobleness or generosity from him who could lead those deluded by his artifice and sophistry to the brink of destruction, and upon the least appearance of danger, leave them a sacrifice to his turbulence and ambition.

When a man is appointed to office, who, tho' a stranger among us, commenced his public career by an avowed hostility to our laws, and by countenancing and persuading an opposition to our government—who threatened infamy and destruction to those officers who dared to perform their duty—when such a man is placed as the second officer under the president, what can we expect, but contempt of our laws, and insult to our citizens?

Valuable Property FOR SALE.

One Tract of about 1,100 acres of land within five miles of Alexandria, on which are a good Grist Mill with two pair of stones in good order; a Distillery with three stills and a boiler, the house has lately been enlarged and put in complete order; a dwelling house with two rooms on the first and four on the second floor; an excellent ice house, wash-house and kitchen, all almost new and in good order; a large barn and stable almost new; several out houses for the miller, distiller and work people, corn house, smoke house, spring house, and fowl's houses, and a very good garden. There are about 2500 fruit trees on the land, all of the choicest sorts America can afford, and we will venture to say that there is not a better collection in Virginia; about sixty acres of the land are in meadow, and about 700 acres in woods, and most of it thickly timbered, particularly the bottom land, of which there are about 400 acres, exclusive of the meadow.

One other tract of land about 12 miles from Alexandria, and adjoining on the south side of Raven's worth, containing about 170 acres. This land is well situated for farming; there is a framed dwelling house on it, with two rooms on the first and two on the second floor.

One other Tract about five miles from Alexandria, near the turnpike road and the land of Mr. Charles Lee, occupied by Mr. Kendall, containing 80 acres and most of it in woods. The only improvement on this land is a pretty good log house.

Lots in Alexandria.

That Lot of Ground on which the bake house and dwelling house stand, at present occupied by Mr. Andrew Jamieson.

The Lot adjoining the bake house lot, on which the tobacco warehouses stand.

A large Lot opposite the tobacco warehouses, on which are two small framed dwelling houses and a carriage house.

A Lot on the north west corner of Queen and St. Asaph streets, containing 6000 feet on Queen street and about 100 feet on St. Asaph street.

A Lot on the east side of Washington street, near Queen street, containing 6000 feet on Washington street, and in depth 170 feet, with the benefit of an alley of 10 feet 6 inches, running the whole distance on the south side and east end of the lot.

Lands in the Western Country.

One Tract of 1,675 acres, one of 2,000 acres, and one of 3,000 acres in Randolph, formerly Harrison county, Virginia, equal in quality to most of the lands in that county. One tract in Kentucky, formerly Montgomery county, on Mud river, containing about 3,000 acres; this land is about 40 miles below the mouth of Great Kentucky, and about 6 miles from the Ohio river, is almost all bottom land and equal in quality to any land in that county, and navigable within two miles of the land.

One Tract of 400 acres on Cocke's creek, which empties into the Great Kentucky, said to be very valuable.

Twenty Dollars Reward.

Ran-away from the Subscriber, at Frederickburgh, on the 25th inst. a negro man named from 30 to 35 years of age, about 5 feet 6 or 7 inches high, well made, of a yellowish complexion; speaks loud when spoken to, and the lower part of both his ears cut. Had on when he eloped, a snuff coloured broad cloth coat, striped swan down waist coat, white Russia Sheetting trousers, black fur hat with a small rim, and shoes; but having other clothes, it is probable he may change his dress. It is expected he will endeavor to impose himself on the public as a free man, as I am informed he has a pass.

The above reward, and all reasonable charges, will be paid, for securing him, so that the subscriber gets him again, on giving information to Mr. John Hodgkins, Alexandria.

Wm. Campbell.

N. B. Masters of vessels and others are forbid harbouring said fellow, as they will be prosecuted to the utmost rigor of the law.

AGRICULTURE,

AND

OTHER INTERESTING TOPICS.

Few works have been published in America, that claim the agriculturist's attention more than this. Added to his own experiments, opinions and calculations, it contains those of the most eminent farmers in the middle states; collected from them by himself, and transmitted to the British Board of Agriculture of which he was an honorary member.

THE FAMOUS JACK

Columbus,

Will stand at Mount Washington, one mile from the George-Town Ferry, and be let to mares at Ten Dollars the season; but if paid by the first of August, Eight Dollars will be received in full, and Half a Dollar to the groom.

Columbus was got by the old Knight of Malta, imported by Gen. Washington, his dam by the Royal Gift, out of the old imported Maltese jennet.

This celebrated Jack is considered by judges as superior to any imported into this country, or raised herein. Gentlemen, doubting the propriety of this assertion, are earnestly requested to view the animal and judge for themselves. He is a Jack of great size and very high form. At the same place may be seen a number of mules, whose performance will give a complete idea of their value.

Pasturage gratis; but not liable for accidents or escapes.
